Chef
Cyril Mendès
offers Mediterranean and Provençal
cuisine

Cyril Mendès

Born in Brive la Gaillarde in 1976, this young chef developed his passion for cooking very early. He learnt at a young age, watching his mother who concocted dishes for the whole family by blending foods from the South-West of France and her native Portugal.

When he was old enough to choose his path, he naturally turned to the kitchen and completed his apprenticeship with flying colours, opening the doors of haute cuisine to him when he was just 17 years old and started as a commis chef at the Ritz in Paris, alongside Michel Roth Bocuse d'Or - MOF.

Impressed by luxury hotels, everything came together very quickly during the seasons between Courchevel, Méribel and St Tropez, climbing the ladder at 4 and 5-star establishments until taking his first Chef position at just 26 years old.

He'll go on to preside over many renowned establishments including Mas d'Artigny in St Paul de Vence or le Palace des Neiges and l'Alpe Hôtel du Pralong in Courchevel.

In 2014, he falls completely in love with Provence and settles in Nîmes. He then discovered Luberon and the richness of this region. He then runs the Domain des Andéols kitchens in 2016.

It's with this spirit of challenge and creativity that he takes over the kitchens of Mas des Herbes Blanches today, hoping to perpetuate the feeling of luxury, finesse and expertise of Relais and Châteaux houses with the help of his team.

His dishes reflect both his close relationships with producers in Luberon as well as his curiosity and hunger for inventive dishes
